We refer to the device known as "burning the candle at both ends," or in other words living mestally or physically at a pace that kills in half the ordinary time. Late hours, over-study, excesses, business cares and worries, printing of the vital energies, which soon leaves its imprint on mind, body, and leads us surely to inprint on mind, body, and leads us surely to insanity, paralysis, and death, as does typhosis fever or consumptions.

Siecpless to-day, nervous to-morrow, duil the next day, brain not quite clear, head ashing a little, neuralizin now and then, heart beating a trino, digestion somewhat deranges, ideas cloudy and beforged. Yet the same work, drive, energy, push, and more exhaustion:

By It any wonder our insane asylums are over.
